People to Jobs is a program that works to improve public transportation in cities and towns in Southwestern Connecticut so that residents – including low-income workers and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families recipients – can have better access to jobs. Formed in 1996, the People to Jobs Regional Transportation Task Force, in collaboration with transit operators, decides where additional routes or extended hours of service are needed. People to Jobs also provides transportation planning assistance through the CTWorks Career Centers. Staff members are available to assist jobseekers in navigating bus routes for travel to training, job interviews, employment, and childcare.

Developed by the People to Jobs Regional Transportation Task Force, a project of The Workplace, Inc., in partnership with the Connecticut Department of Social Services, Connecticut Department of Transportation, and the Federal Transit Administration.

Where do you need to go?

If you are considering a new job, going to school, or just want to find an easier way to get to where you need to go, this guide can help.

Here are the three steps you'll need to take to determine your best way to get there:

1. Are you traveling locally or regionally?

See the panel to the right to learn the difference between local and regional, and what travel options are available for each.

2. Find your starting and ending points on the map.

See the map on the inside of this brochure.

3. Find your transit provider.

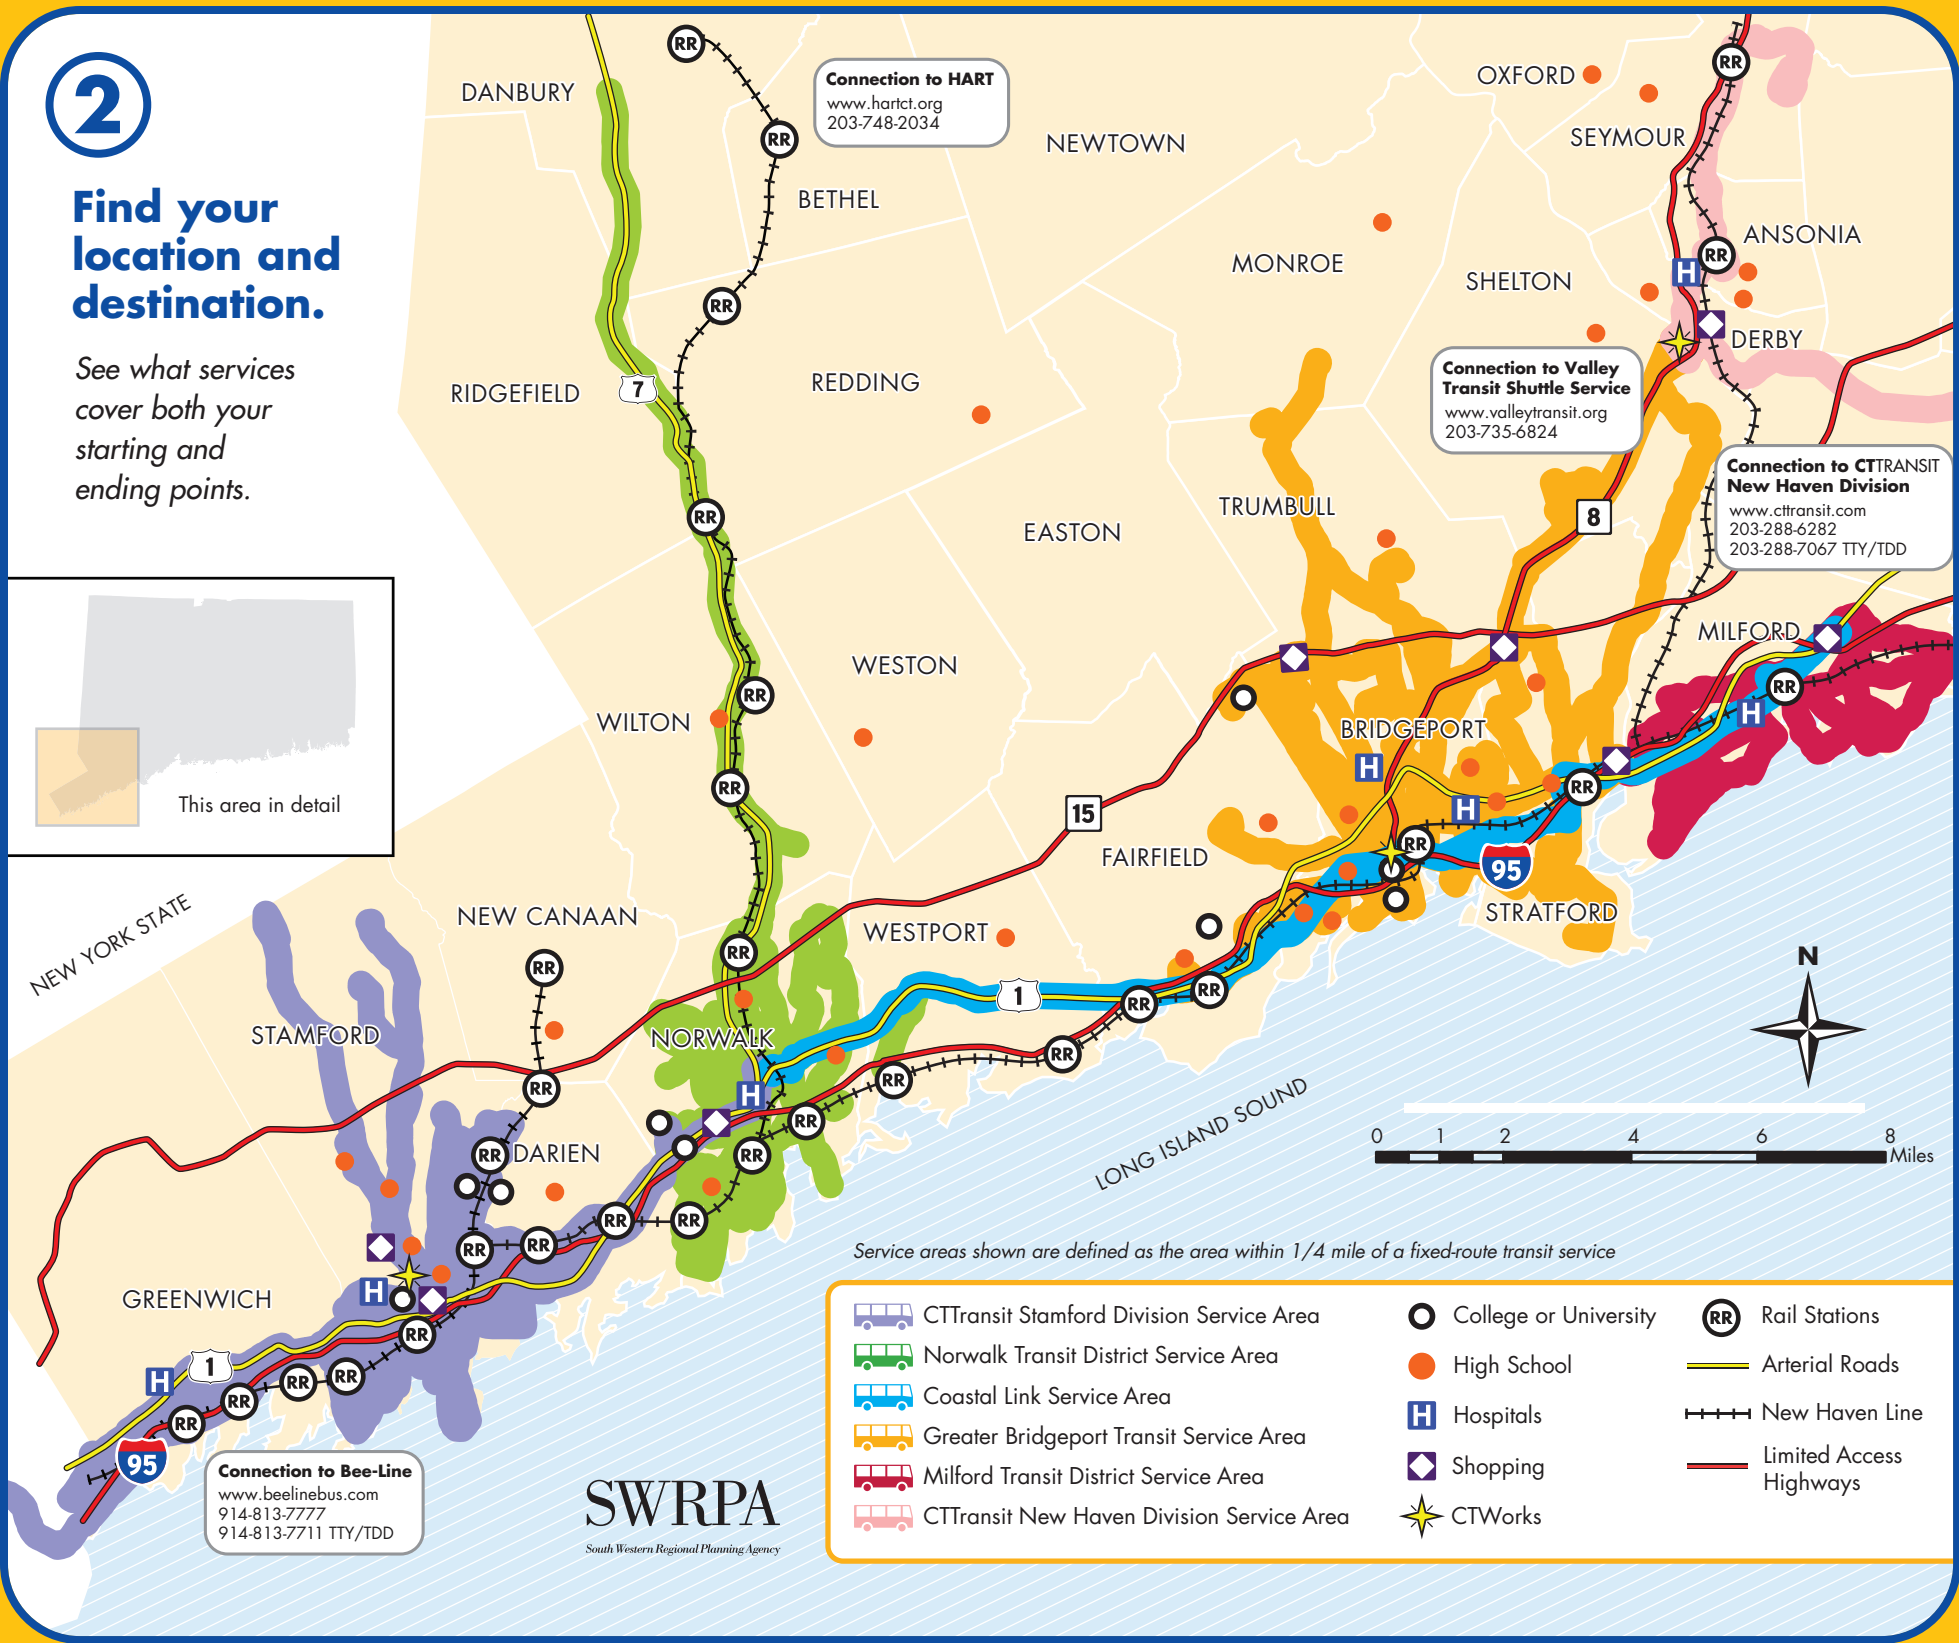

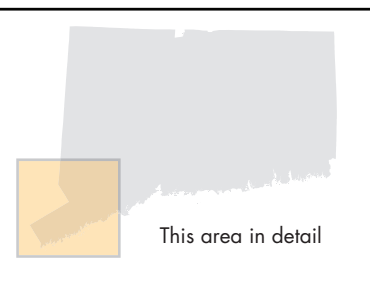

For bus schedules, fares, and other information contact the transit provider in your area.

2

Find your location and destination.

See what services cover both your starting and ending points.

Service areas shown are defined as the area within 1/4 mile of a fixed-route transit service
